Chapter 1 by Mariella Sialer

Since I was a little girl, I had this terrible fear to the dark spaces. At first, Mom gave me this little stickers I could paste into the ceiling and they shined like stars at night.

But mom, didn't knew that I wasn't afraid to the dark because of the dark, I was afraid of that terrible sound that makes echo in my head when all the lights were out.

I was afraid of that noise that resound once and another...

Chapter 2 by jeffyb

Yet here I am. In the dark.

A cold shiver slides down my spine and I am trying everything I can to keep my mind off of the black void ahead of me. I have never felt so alone in this unknown place. I am not sure how I got here. The last thing I remember is having some drink with a few colleagues after work.

It's so dark that my eyes cannot adjust at all.

How did I get here?

What time is it?

Where is this place?

Am I bleeding from my head?

Yes. I was definitely bleeding. I could feel it. See more of Story Wars
At my fingers in my mouth there was no doubt of it.

Am I going to die?

Chapter 3 by intellikat

Suddenly, a beam of light cut through the darkness and a figure appeared in what appeared a doorway.

"She's here. A prime specimen. Eighteen years old. Brunette. American south. Teeth looks straight and clean. No tattoos or piercings. The bidding will start at 5000."

Another figure appeared from behind the first. I could see something glimmering in its clenched hand.
